Frenchman First to Get Idea of Sewing Machine?

France has celebrated the centenary of the invention by one of her citizens of the sewing machine. It is claimed that it was M. Barthélémy Thimonnier, a native of Athis-le-Val. In the Rhône, who first conceived the idea of making a machine do the work of hand-driven needles, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

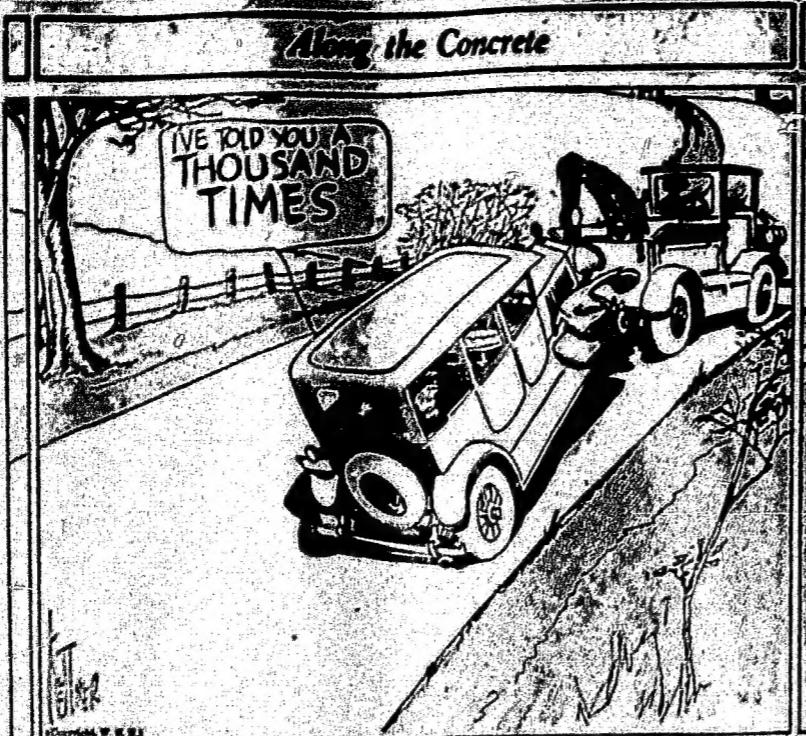

Thimonnier was a tailor, but once he began to work on his idea he became so engrossed in it that he neglected his own business to the point of ruin, and many of his neighbors roundly declared that he was a madman. He persevered in his experiments, which were the more difficult because he had no even an elementary knowledge of mechanics, and in 1800 took out his first patent.

An inspector of mines who happened to be visiting the region at that time realized the great potentiality of Thimonnier's invention, and installed him in a workshop in Paris.

Helium Production
The production of helium from natural gas in the United States from filling balloons and airships originated in the United States Bureau of Mines in the spring of 1917 just after this country entered the World War. Helium had been discovered as a constituent of natural gas in 1905 at the University of Kansas by Professor Cady and Doctor McFarland. It had been discovered in mineral substances by Sir William Ramsay as far back as 1895, and its properties were then studied sufficiently to demonstrate that if it could be obtained in sufficient quantity it would prove the ideal gas for balloons and airships on account of its extreme lightness and absolute inertness.

Odd Smallpox Cure
Voltaire, back in 1723, suffered from smallpox. He recovered after being in bed a month. To be the father of a woman who was to play a great part in his life in the following 16 years, he made this optimistic report of the remedy which he is confident alone made possible his quick recovery:

"Smallpox is, in a simple form, merely the blood ridding itself of its impurities, and positively paves the way to more vigorous health. The doctor gave me emetics eight times, and made me drink a hundred pints of lemons. This treatment, which you will think extraordinary, was the only one which could possibly have saved my life."—Detroit News.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women.

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical, versatile, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated. Finally the way was found.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car.

All of these things are done in the interest of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

CONGR

THE OLD MASON ELM

The old tree stood for a hundred years
A sentinel grand and tall,
The young grew old, the old passed on,
And the elm watched o'er all.

Near the banks of the Androscoggin,
In this valley wondrous fair,
It grew and grew in strength and grace
One hundred feet in the air.

Then came a wind with its mighty force

And more quickly than one can say,
This old landmark beloved by all,
From our sight was swept away.

Goodbye, old elm! We've watched you grow,
And, though from our sight you've gone,

A picture rare stays in our minds
As the years pass on and on.

Famous Statuary Hall

Senator Morris' Plan
Justin Smith Morrill, a man with a plan of putting statues in the Capitol of prominent men from each state.
The National Statuary Hall, semi-circular in shape and designed by F. J. O'Conor after a Greek theater, is one of the most beautiful rooms of the Capitol.
On the left side it has a colonnade
of colonnades with white marble pillars, and a series of alcoves with statues on the south side supporting a colonnade.
The colonnade is 110 feet long and 10 feet high. The room is 110 feet long and 40 feet wide. The ceiling is 40 feet high.
The room is 110 feet long and 40 feet wide.
The ceiling is 40 feet high.

The apartment that they finally
agreed upon was two flights up in a tower without an elevator. It was a dark apartment with two windows looking out on a rather pleasant backyard and with the rest of the windows on a court. The rent was high, very little for three days, even less than Joan and Andrew had planned in their most frugal moments.

"We'll make the kitchen the main room—well eat there and I'll have the walls painted a cheerful yellow, with blue and white gingham curtains at the window. We'll have a nice big bedroom—so two rooms ought to be enough. Then we won't ever have to worry about living beyond our income and we can save a little besides."

By way of answer Andrew pressed Joan's warm little hand. "There aren't many girls like you, Joan," he said. "You don't seem to care a bit about money."

"I don't," said Joan with interest.
"In fact, Andrew, I've always looked forward to starting married life just like a bridegroom and they came at last to an apartment that weighed 12,000 pounds and was 10 years old. This apartment was falling to pieces and while we sat there, perhaps 15 minutes,
he did not show any outward signs that he was even aware. One of the poor questions I had to the guide, and that I must have asked him, was
"Can I be an alligator?" he said,
"and I could not find out what he meant by it. I asked him again to explain and he said, 'Yes, you can be an alligator if you want to be one.'
"The last time I asked him he said
"Well, you can be an alligator if you want to be one."

"Yes, unless they might have to go back tomorrow," I said. Answers to my questions were few and far between.

A Wife Saying

"A man can't be strong enough to say simple things in their truth," says Dr. E. E. Hall. "Today the whole world upholds him." Up to the time of Galileo, such mathematicians as Hobbes and Huyghen had been able to prove that the sun revolved around the earth. Galileo, however, had to prove that the earth revolved around the sun. He was persecuted and condemned to life imprisonment
and he died in prison.

"Why don't you say something?" said his wife to a friend. "It's not fair to make him go to prison."

"My wife is right," replied the stranger. "It's unfair to a relative of my wife and she has said him to the house for dinner this evening."

Women Become Silent Sex
Women of England, especially professional women, have acquired a new virtue—silence. Newcomers into the professions are oxidized the men in their desire for professional etiquette, and refuse to advertise. Many people have declared that successful professional women are less "human" than successful professional men. It is claimed that they suffer from a "hierarchy complex" and a sort of "divine right of queens," keeping themselves in impenetrable barriers of silence and self-importance.

When a Man
Marries
By JANE OSBORN

ON SATURDAY afternoons they went about looking at small inexpensive apartments and until Joan became used to it she felt acute embarrassment.

"You silly child," assured Andrew as they walked along down a side street in search of an apartment they had seen advertised. "There is nothing to it; it means that there is still childishness, a soundness of emotion, an immediate rapport with fellow beings."

"Only, you are going to live there before we are married," said Joan with embarrassment. "That might be funny."

"We don't have to tell every agent on the planet," Andrew assured her. "And when we have definitely settled on the apartment we can explain matter and there won't be anything surprise-ing about it."

It was late winter and Andrew and Joan did not intend to be married until the following autumn. Meantime they had decided that they ought to select their apartment now while they would have a wider selection than in the autumn. As a matter of economy Andrew would make his bachelor home here until autumn cooking his own breakfasts by way of economy and dining at an inexpensive restaurant when he did not dine at Joan's home.

The apartment that they finally
agreed upon was two flights up in a
tower without an elevator. It was a

RUSSIA BEING TAUGHT THAT
U. S. PLANS WAR ON THEM

American Society Girls Learn Masses
Look for Revolution in United States.

New York.—All of Russia is being taught to believe that the United States, Great Britain, and other capitalistic governments plan a war to overthrow the Soviets and the gigantic Red army must be maintained and developed not for conquest but for defense. And the mass of the Bolshevik supporters are thoroughly convinced that America will experience a revolution and be governed by its own Soviets by 1932.

These are the reports brought back from Russia by Adelaide and Helen Hooker, New York society girls, who, prompted by the spirit of adventure and curiosity, have spent several months living the life of the Russian people in the outlying provinces of the republic as well as in Moscow. The former, writing of their experiences in Good Housekeeping Magazine, reports conversations with Russians of varying degrees. Particularly, she describes a meeting with a young Red soldier on a train bound for a provincial destination.

"What do I think of Russia?" he wanted to know. "Of course, it is still very poor, but give it time. Why does America hate the Soviets so? We are all brothers and comrades. How wonderful it would be if America could have her own Soviet, and then there would be no more capitalistic wars! Why are England and America so determined to have a war against their Russian comrades? There must be no war but revolution—Red revolution—and after that freedom and education for the oppressed workers."

"I asked if he would like to see a revolution in America.

"Oh, yes, it will come, probably before two years now."

"Why, not so long ago many Russian people had tried to change their rubles into dollars and hide them away. But the Soviet had heard and warned them. They said there would be revolution there very soon now and the American dollar would not be worth a kopeck."

Again in the Good Housekeeping article Miss Hooker quotes an old woman traveler:

"Oh, do you really think that America will not make war upon us? If I could only believe it! We have suffered so, our people have starved to death, but we can stand anything if only there is not another war. They took my Vanya, my Alyosha, and our little Father Czar. And here my Vanya's daughter is all I have left. Her mother died of hunger. Oh, what sorrows has God brought on Holy Russia!"

Horses Hold Own With

Automobiles in France

Paris.—The automobile is not replacing the horse in France, an official survey reveals. The total number of horses in France in 1929 was estimated to be nearly the same as in 1913.

The survey shows that in 1913 there were approximately 3,200,000 horses in France. During the war millions of them were killed in action, while many were eaten for food. But the farmers of France refused to introduce tractors, and instead started breeding new herds of horses. As a result, France is now well supplied with horseflesh. It is also said the quality is much better, and that more horses are butchered at an earlier age because the public demands more tender meat.

Horseflesh still remains a popular meat in France and special butcher shops bear great metal horses' heads over their doors. France imported 17,000 horses in 1923 and exported only 7,372.

Fears Wedding Anger;

Hides in Dad's Safe

Baltimore, Md.—A special new way of breaking the news to dad was tried here recently by Arthur Graham Robinet, son of John H. Robinet, a city official, in telling of his marriage to Miss Cornelia Malan.

The place of the disclosure was the elder Robinet's office in the city hall. A clerk approached him and said:

"Your son has been married and he asked me to tell you."

"What? Where is he now?"

"Hiding in the office safe."

Young Robinet was brought from his hiding place. He explained that he had eloped because he was afraid his father would object.

"Well, you are twenty-two years old and no one can stop you. If you had only said something I would have given you a real wedding and a real send-off," said dad. Meanwhile the bride had been busy breaking the news to her family.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Southern Italy Devastated by Quake—Thousands Killed or Injured.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SOUTHERN Italy was rocked and torn by the worst earthquake in that region since the terrible disaster that destroyed Messina in 1908. Definite figures on the loss of life may not be known for many days. At this writing it is known that 2,013 persons were killed and twice as many injured. Communications in the stricken area broke down and airplanes were being used for relief and exploration work.

The provinces of Puglia, Campania and Basilicata sustained the worst of the tremor, but it was felt as far north as Abruzzi and Molise. The quake, which started at 1:15 in the morning, centered around the old volcano Mount Vulture, and the city of Melfi, just north of that cone, was destroyed, as were also the nearby towns of Lacedona, Agropoli, Bosco and Ariano. Many other cities and villages were partly razed and famous palaces and churches were ruined. Even Rome and Naples were badly shaken, and several persons were killed in the latter city.

Premier Mussolini promptly took command of the situation and rescue and relief measures were put into effect quickly throughout the devastated region. The Red Cross and the army, with help of physicians and nurses, have hurried to the scene. Pope Pius has ordered that all be sent to places in urgent need and a relief fund held in readiness by the Vatican.

Though southern Italy was thronged with tourists, it was believed there were no casualties among the Americans there.

Two days after the earthquake a tornado swept over the Veneto district, killing a dozen persons and causing heavy damage over a stretch of 23 miles.

GERMANY also had its disaster, a vastly less in magnitude but shocking enough. During the celebration in Cologne of the execution of the Hitlerites, in which President von Hindenburg was the central figure, a fountain broke across the Moselle, causing about 100 men, women and children to precipitate into the river. Many of them were killed by the falling stones and many others drowned. The bodies of 34 were recovered and it was feared more might be found to drown. The celebrations which had been going on for several days were brought to an end by the accident.

OVER in England there was an air raid shelter made suitable by the promoters of the Göttingen Junkers air race on route from France to England. Men up their gravestones and the air raiders were killed. They were the parents of Jennifer and Ava, Viscountess Linam, a noted beauty and close friend of the prince of Wales; Sir Edward Ward; Mrs. Dennis Lafferty, well-known society woman; Lieut. Col. George L. P. Henderson, the pilot, who was rated as one of England's best flyers, and Charles Merton, second pilot.

THAT London naval treaty is now in effect so far as American action goes. The Senate by a vote of 53 to 9, ratified the pact, and last day President Hoover signed it with the gold pen used by the American delegates to the conference to sign the treaty to London. The document was then sent to London, where parliament was engaged in giving the pact its approval.

In a formal statement President Hoover said: "It is a matter of satisfaction that this great accomplishment in international relations has at all steps been given united support of both our political parties."

"With the ratification by the other governments the treaty will translate an emotion deep in the hearts of millions of men and women into a practical fact of government and international relations. It will renew again the faith of the world in the moral forces of good will and patient negotiation as against the blind forces of suspicion and competitive armament. It will secure the full defense of the United States. It will mark a further long step toward lifting the burdens of militarism from the backs of mankind and to speed the march forward of world peace. It will lay the foundations upon which further constructive effort in world arms may be accomplished in the future. We should by this act of willingness to join with others in limiting armament have dismissed from the mind of the world any notion that the United States entertains ideas of aggression, imperial power or exploitation of far-off nations."

Immediately after the ratification by the senate, the President asked for the names of those who voted in opposition. These were Bligham of Connecticut, Hale of Maine, Johnson of California, Moses of New Hampshire, Obbie of Nevada, Pine of Oklahoma and Robinson of Indiana, all Republicans; and McCall of Tennessee and Walsh of Massachusetts, Democrats.

FIVE senators from wheat states—Capper, Allen, McMaster, Howell and Phipps—called on Chairman Legge of the federal farm board in Washington and again urged that the board adopt Capper's plan and buy a lot more wheat in the effort to boost the price. Once more Mr. Legge refused, declaring the scheme would be at best only a temporary expedient and in the long run would make the wheat problem worse. He declared the board, which has 30,000,000 bushels in its hands, need not purchase any more at this time and would sell none until the price advanced.

"What we want," said Mr. Legge, "is something permanent. Stabilization will work admirably on seasonal surpluses but it cannot be used on an accumulative surplus. We have had an accumulative surplus in wheat for four years. Stabilization will not cure it. I don't see stabilization as a failure but it won't work at the present time. To follow Senator Capper's plan would only encourage the farmers in Kansas to raise more wheat and make a bad situation worse."

In Kansas the wheat problem is having powerful effect in the gubernatorial primary campaign. Governor Reed, who attacks the farm board plan for reduction of wheat acreage up for renomination by the stephen Kansas and is opposed by Frank Huake of Council Grove, a farmer who upholds Capper's plan, is a failure but it won't work at the present time. To follow Senator Capper's plan would only encourage the farmers in Kansas to raise more wheat and make a bad situation worse."

DEMOCRATS of Iowa in state convention adopted a plank in their platform calling for "a reasonable definition" of what constitutes intoxicating liquor and advocating a nation-wide referendum on prohibition. The reason for this stand, the resolution says, is the "nation-wide scandal" brought about by dry law enforcement methods. In this way the Democrats accepted the challenge of the Republican state convention, which voted down a resolution urging modification of the prohibition law.

ROTING by the Egyptian Wadie was renewed last week in Cairo and Port Said, and there were a number of deaths in the battles with the police and troops. Up to date the British had not intervened.

MISRA Pasha, Egyptian finance minister, declared before the inter-parliamentary congress in session in London that in Egypt today a struggle is going on between brutal attorneys and democracy, and that innocent blood is being shed. For the fourth time in five years, he said, the Egyptian parliament has been suspended and the people goaded beyond endurance.

GILLEN H. CURTISS, a distinguished pioneer in aviation, died suddenly in a Buffalo hospital at the age of fifty-two years. He was operated on recently for appendicitis and was thought to be well on the road to recovery. Mr. Curtiss was one of the foremost aviation experimenters and was ranked next to the Wright brothers. He retired from active business shortly after the World war, retaining directorships in several companies that bear his name.

Another well-known American who passed away was James Eads How, "millionaire hobo," who during his life had spent a large fortune in trying to help the hobos, denying himself even sumptuous food and clothing and other necessities of life. He died in a hospital at Staunton, Va.

Only a few hours after the Detroit voters had put Bowles out of office, Gerald Buckley, a radio announcer who had been delivering addresses describing vice conditions in Detroit and criticizing the mayor's administration, was shot to death in the lobby of a hotel by three men who escaped. This was the eleventh gang murder in the city in fifteen days. Governor Green ordered the state police to investigate the crime independently and said he would call out state troops, if necessary, to stop the assassinations. There were rumors of similarity between the murder of Buckley and that of Jake Lingle, the Radway's room.

"A letter for the Doc," said Silvers.

Todd drew him in and shut the door.

"Where is it?" Todd demanded.

"It's for the Doc."

"I'll give it to him." Todd snatched it from him roughly. Instinctively he felt there must be something heroic which would give color to his speech. "It's all right," he answered.

"You'd better hear the whole thing from the beginning."

He was surprised at Mrs. Radway's suddenly changed attitude.

"Spare us that," she said. "Never had he seen her look so old and unapproachable. She had learned in the space of a few seconds that the man she had idealized was indeed a member of this crew of crime. It isn't Orme, either," he answered.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

L. A. Edwards, Pastor
Sunday, August 3rd

10:45 Morning Worship. The subject of sermon by the pastor will be, "Cannon or Compass".

A battle ship would accomplish little in the work for which it was designed unless the compass was in a working condition. If the metal in the gun of the ship deflects the needle of the compass, disaster would surely follow.

The Church has often been likened to a ship and the question arises, as we see the course the ship has at times taken. Has some of the cargo that it has carried deflected the compass and given it false direction?

Must we dispose of some things that we have placed high value upon, that our course may be straight, that we may reach the desired haven?
